Corval Group Continues “Exceptional” Safety Performance Company Reaches Four Million Hours Worked With Zero Lost Time Injuries

ST. PAUL, MN, January 1, 2014 – Corval Group is pleased to announce that it has recently completed more than 4,000,000 man hours without a lost time injury. To reach this achievement, Corval has embraced safety at all levels of the organization.

According to Corval’s President and COO, Jim Simon, “I want to congratulate the employees of Corval on this exceptional accomplishment. Reaching this mark affirms the efforts and dedication of our employees in building a safety culture.”

By recognizing the importance of safety in the workplace and emphasizing personal safety in every work location, Corval remains in the top of its class when it comes to safety. The company’s last lost workday occurred in 2008 and they celebrated one million hours recordable free this past October.

“Safety is emphasized from the moment of hire throughout our day-to-day operations,” said John Rutledge, Safety Director. “With safety as our foundational value, we will continue to seek out ways to keep safety at the forefront of our operations.”
